

Quotes from attendees on the Kansas Bullying Prevention Program

SuEllen Fried, Author of: Bullies & victims: helping your child survive the schoolyard battlefield

“You have constructed the most comprehensive, effective substantive material and your presentation style is spectacular!”

Former Kansas Attorney General Carla J. Stovall presenting Randy Wiler the Commitment to Children’s Service Award at the 23rd. Annual Governor’s Conference.

“I am proud to recognize Randy for his vision in developing this program and striving to prevent bullying in our schools.”

Sheila J. Foley, State D.A.R.E. Coordinator for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts Criminal Justice Training Council.

“As you read through the evaluations, the feedback about your presentation was very positive. The attendees appreciated your teaching style and felt the information would be of value to them.”

Margaret Willis, MA, RN, Program Director Health and Human Services, Johnson County Community College.

“The evaluations were excellent. I heard many appreciative comments from participants regarding both your content and warm, friendly and entertaining presentation style.”

Traci J. Sanders, State Initiatives Counsel, National Association of Attorneys General.

“I wanted to thank you for the presentation you made at our recent crime prevention and juvenile justice summit in Kansas City. ...It was a pleasure to leave with the feeling that there is something we can do and something that is being done, to avoid fulfilling all the prophecies of doom for this country’s children.”

Sandra V. Walker, Secretary’s Regional Representative, U.S. Department of Education.

“I commend you for taking a proactive stance for safer schools. Please keep me apprised of the Kansas Bullying Prevention Program as it develops.”

Dennis Moore, Congress of the United States, House of Representatives.

“I cannot tell you how many positive comments we have received about the program.”

Debra Pepler, Psychologist, York University, Ontario, Canada.

“What a wonderful practical application of research to everyday life...Do you mind if I use your idea on building assertiveness among children who are bullied? It is a delight for me to know that what we do reaches beyond our local area.”

Andra J. Bannister, Ph.D. Regional Community Policing Training Institute at Wichita State University.

“Your presentation was innovative and very informative. It is obvious that you are an expert on this topic and eager to share your knowledge. We were extremely pleased that you were able to attend and provide insight on this contemporary topic.”

Harriet Hayward, Executive Director Johnson County Medical Society.

“Your comments were right on. From the remarks made by the audience, the program made an impact. Your provocative remarks stimulated a new way of thinking about an on going problem.”

Patricia A. Gallagher, Professor, Special Education, the University of Kansas Medical Center.
“Your presentation was a great jump start to our course. Last night the class met again and they were still talking about you and how much they have learned. Thanks again.”

Larry Welch, Director, Kansas Bureau of Investigation.
“Randy provided one of the best presentations of the day at the Attorney General’s Youth Crime and Violence Conference at Topeka. His presentation was very well received by not only the law enforcement members in the audience but also by those in the audience from the education and medical fields.”

Linda F. Carter, Office of District Attorney Johnson County Kansas.
“I would like to express our appreciation to you for your participation at the Victims’ Rights Workshop Panel. Your presentation was very informative, and I personally heard some very complimentary remarks concerning the information you provided to the group.”

Sherrilyn Fisher, Ph.D., Wyandotte Special Education Cooperative.
“We were delighted with both the content of your message and the way the information was presented—with humor, understanding and empathy for students and for the adults who work with them.”

Joyce V. Scammahorn, Robert E. Clark Middle School.
“What a treat! You were so energetic, approachable and full of pertinent information regarding students and their behavior. All the comments from the staff and those attending your presentation have been very positive.”

Amy Bollig, Sexual Assault Prevention Coordinator, Kansas Department of Health & Environment.
“The Kansas Bullying Prevention Program is an excellent example of a prevention program that will help us in our efforts to reduce violence. The information, materials, and resources you provided are incredible and very user-friendly. You are doing a wonderful service for our state!”
